Code of Conduct: Summary for Colleagues

Policy No. HR-101. Owner: Ethics and Compliance. This summary is not a substitute for the full Code, which is available in Policy Hub.

Our Commitments

- We act in the client's interest first and document the basis for recommendations.
- We speak up when something looks wrong, and we do not retaliate against anyone who does.
- We keep accurate books and records, including time and expense records.
- We protect confidential information belonging to clients, colleagues, and the firm.
- We compete on the merits and never on the basis of improper payments or gifts.

Gifts and Entertainment

Situation	Threshold	Action
Business meal with a client	Under $150 per person	No pre-approval required
Gift received from a vendor	Under $100	Log in the Gifts register
Gift received from a vendor	$100 or more	Decline or escalate to Compliance
Any gift to a government official	Any value	Pre-approval from Compliance required

Speaking Up

Raise a concern with your manager, an Employee Relations Partner, Compliance, or the Ethics Helpline. Reports may be made anonymously where local law allows. Retaliation against a colleague who raises a concern in good faith is itself a violation of the Code and is treated as a serious disciplinary matter.
